Ok. When compared with the financial assurance amount adjusted for inflation, it looked like the cost estimate was just updated for post-closure cost and contingency cost. Thanks for the clarification and we will state it is based on 20023-dollar value.

Thanks again for the quick response.

Shyamala,

The cost estimates provided are based on 2023 costs, not the February 2019 approval. Previous cost estimates included a single cost per ton for proper transportation and disposal for solidification, both landfill and EFW blend. When the cost estimate was being prepared for the permit renewal in 2023, it was realized a separate cost per ton for landfill disposal and EFW blend disposal were needed since the per ton landfill cost is much less than the EFW disposal per ton cost.

If you have any questions or would like additional information please let me know.

Thanks, Sue.

Just a quick question, the cost estimates seem to be based on the February 2019 approval and not updated for inflation – just wanted to make sure. In the approval, we can state it is based on 2019-dollar value and the financial assurance amount will need to reflect the inflation adjustment.

Thanks.
